EXAMPLE OF ARTICLE DESIGN

NON-PAYMENT OF TAXES IN THE CHINESE PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC AND THE RUSSIAN FEDERATION

© A.I. Antonov

3rd year student,
Buryat State University,
Russia, Ulan-Ude
alex@mail.ru

The article deals with the regulatory legal acts in the People's Republic of China and the Russian Federation, as well as the responsibility for non-payment of taxes in the compared countries. Conclusions are made about a possible reduction in non-payment of taxes and tax liability in the compared countries. Examples of non-payment of taxes and the amount of punishment in case of non-payment of taxes are given. Analyzed public authorities that are investigating this category of cases. The purpose of the work is to study the regulations, the type of responsibility and punishment in the field of regulation of tax legal relations. The work also uses general scientific and special research methods (analogy, analysis, synthesis, comparative legal).

Key words: tax evasion, tax crimes, tax liability, taxes, fines.

Nowadays, there is no state that would not have legally established taxes, all because it is through taxes, the state supports the functioning: education, police, health care, and so on.

Moreover, in some countries there is even a constitutional obligation to pay taxes, for example, Article 57 of the Constitution of Russia, states that everyone is obliged to pay lawfully established taxes and levies[1], as well as in the Constitution of China, there is a similar Article 56, which also obliges citizens of the People's Republic of China to pay taxes[2].

In general, tax evasion, leads to the loss of income in the state, as a measure of the well-being of the economy of the country. And that is why we believe that it is necessary to prevent and prevent crimes, also to improve the standard of living, and, of course, to introduce a fair punishment for it. Since the number of crimes is not reduced by increasing the punishment, but by increasing the crime detection rate. For example, if one crime out of a hundred is solved, it makes no sense to toughen the punishment, that is, if the solvability will be very high, the crime will tend to zero, regardless of the punishment. A rational person will refuse to commit crimes completely, and there will be only a small percentage of crimes committed by the mentally ill, for example. As a result, to encourage a person to pay taxes, it is necessary to conduct prevention and publish in the media, as is done with smoking, to improve the solvability of crimes for these types of crimes, which would tell taxpayers about the inevitability of punishment for non-payment of tax.
